

THE CENTENARY JOURNAL

A decision was reached in full committee to produce just one issue of the Journal in 1995, the Centenary year. This will probably appear mid-Summer.

Our aim is to make this a very special bumper issue, which should more than compensate members who might otherwise have expected the normal two Journals next year. It will also relieve (just very slightly) some of the pressure on your extremely over-worked Editor, who will have been coping with all the tribulations of such a special issue at the same time as preparing a book on HW.

In place of the second Journal of the year, however, we will be producing an Index to all the issues of the Journal so far. This will be of great use to both students and researchers, as well as to members. The work is being prepared by Ian Abernethy.

In this way we hope to honour our commitment to the membership at not too great an extra cost.

*Please note that the latest date for receiving copy for consideration for inclusion is 1st February 1995, but earlier receipt would be appreciated.

A note from Stephen Francis Clarke

Members with access to video-players might care to learn about a splendid new video featuring the Lynton and Barnstaple Railway. It includes a great deal of footage from at least three archive collections and provides an evocative view of contemporary Williamson country (HW himself travelled on the little narrow-gauge railway and recorded the event in his 'On Foot in Devon' (1933).

The approximate running time of the film is 65 minutes. It is produced by Oakwood Video Library, Dept. 2, P.O. Box 112, Headington, Oxford OX3 8LU [tel: 0865 874080] and is 'Number Five' in the Oakwood Video Library
